WHEELING, W. VA., MARCH 2, 1886.

When Sherman was retired there was lapse of the office of General of the Army created for Grant, and though Sheridan is at the head of the army he is only Lieut General.

There has always been an impression that the office would be revived for the benefit of Sheridan and Hancock, officers who deserved the highest military rewards. Hancock is gone, and after Sheridan there will be none whose eminence in the late war will give them a claim upon the highest distinction. Sheridan has won a General's commission. 'The world over he is recognized as one of the fore-most soldiers of history. To solid parts atfairs hereabouts reached a crisis, that the United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue, who for a time led a faction here with some succese, must be called from his ordicial cares at Washington to set things straight in Wheeling? It is no secret that, with a few exceptions, Wheeling Democrats got on sa well, had as large a share of this world's goods and its fleeting honors, when a Republican sat in the seat of Jefferson and Jackson. But the distinguishing trait of a Wheeling Democrat is that he doesn't want office; he will not seek it; and when cilice pursues him he hides himself or runs off to Wastingthe United States Commissioner of Internot seek it; and when cilice pursues him he hides himself or runs off to Washing-

She said it was going to be "a big affair," and it wouldn't matter whether and connect them according to the original intention, and then attend to districts of secondary importance. South and connect them according to the original intention, and then attend to districts of secondary importance. South and their turn. Would there were enough to give official station" who declared that Miss to each all they could desire, but failing the without granding what has been official station" who declared that Miss Cleveland always gives a "baug-up feed, and has more stuff than the folks can eat," for which reason she thought it in good form to take some of the dainties away in her pocket.

The shock will at least be gradual if we hear now that "a lady of high official position" has been betrayed by the enthu-

with him as a man dealing in a business way with other men. The Washington correspondent of the New York Sun makes these strong points:

these strong points:

A very slight view of the situation exhibits a far deeper grief than the present possession of the remnant of stock he may have. Gen Johnston struck the key note of the situation when he wrote his letter of December 23, 1883, to Dr. Rogers and said: "For if the enterprises should not succeed, all concerned in them would be considered by the public as swindlers. I mean all concerned—all of us." Gen. Johnston's state of mind was perhaps mean all concerned—all of us." Gen, Johnston's state of mind was perhaps more troubled than his associates. He was bred an army officer, and had that dread of being snepected as a swindler which his education had instilled; but even to the others the situation must have seemed alarming.

It was necessary to do this, or else no stock or "rights" could be sold, and he did it. State rights were sold and the proceeds divided, and he has had his share. Companies relying upon that certificate have paid in their money, believing that he would not so certify unless the opinions bore him out, and the Hodgers teles coeds divided, and be has had his share. Companies relying upon that certificate have paid in their money, believing that he would not so certify unless the opinions bore him out, and the Rodgers telephone differed is substance from those which had been enjoined. This was the danger which appailed General Johnston when he wrote that half frenzied letter: "I mean all concerned, all of us," will be considered swindlers if we fail to protect the psoule whose money we take.

considered swindlers if we fall to protect the people whose money we take.

The terrible risk was taken, however, but the Garland Company, knowing they infringed, and having so published in a look, did not dare to defend the very first company sued, namely, the Rogers Company sued, namely, the Rogers Company in Philadelphia, where, if ever, a stand should have been made. If not made there there was no chance elsewhere, and there was no remedy unless the Extentive Department could be got to interpose, and if possible protect them from the courts and from diagrace as swindlers.

That experiment is just now being tried, and it is vital to Mr. Garland that it should ucceed. If not, then all the people who have bought stock and telephones under this certificate will consider him and his party "swindlers." If mean all concern-ed, all of us," as General Johnston put "it

The intention in the beginning, as evidenced by the method thus far adopted, was to pave first the main avenues of approach to the city, and to connect them with each other, thus furnishing means of entrance to market supplies and coal from the surrounding country, and for conveying city products from town. Inpursuance of this idea, brick roadways have been constructed radiating from near the center proach to the city, and to connect them with each other, thus furnishing means of entrance to market supplies and coal from the surrounding country, and for conveying city products from town. Inpursuance of this idea, brick roadways have been constructed radiating from near the center of the city to the south, west and east, fall campaign, put Camben men in the north still remaining unimproved, though the records show that the intention of the preceding council was to pave this section also. Manwhile, no complaint has been made since each has had to await its turn, and the natural inference and expectation has been that though last on the list, ours would come in next.

The handsome Commissioner, "you know," came to this district two years from his district two years from his pay in some control that he pay in set is preceding. The handsome of the can lecture our city of the south, west and east, fall campaign, put Camben men in the field early, and give the local ring masters an opportunity to issue orders in time so that the Democratic hosts will know what music they will have to dance to. By all means, Mr. Editor, use your influence have "handsome Joa" do his recuperating in the Northern Panhaudle.

The card has rather the ring of a demand than of the gentle solicitation of an invitation. From which it may be inferred that there are some Wheeling Democrats who want to see the handsome Commissioner and "want to see him quick."

In this season of, balls, parties and luncheons it must be particularly exapperating to have to write about people who are not an faif on all the points of official etiquette.
